b. The Joint Army-Navy Air Intelligence Division (JAN-AID) has assembled, evaluated, analyzed, and transferred to business machine cards much intelligence relating to foreign industrial establishments for use in studies of the strategic vulnerability of foreign countries.

SUBJECT: [REDACTED]

1. It is considered that both the proposed NIA Directive and the proposed CIG Directive, as written, would cause the CIG to duplicate the production of staff intelligence now being produced by the various intelligence agencies of the government. It is further considered that the duplication cannot be eliminated by assigning responsibility for production of this intelligence to the CIG as the particular missions of the various agencies require variations in processing of information to make the resulting intelligence responsive to each mission. On the other hand the necessity that the CIG produce its own staff intelligence in this field is recognized.

2. The CIG can, however, be of great service in coordinating the bringing together in useable form of intelligence information on foreign industrial establishments.

3. On the basis of the above premises the proposed NIA and CIG Directives have been redrafted and are herewith transmitted for consideration of the Intelligence Advisory Board.

BRIEF RESUME OF FOREIGN INDUSTRIAL ESTABLISHMENTS

25X1A

1. It had been realized for some time that there was a definite need to coordinate the activities of the several intelligence agencies in the field of intelligence information on foreign industrial establishments.

2. The project was suggested soon after CIG was established and all agencies agreed that great benefit could be derived if the information then in hand could be assembled and that CIG was the logical agency to implement the plan.

3. Since that time there have been various exchanges of memos pertaining to agency requirements and suggestions as to sources of information on the subject outside of the intelligence agencies such as Department of Commerce, Bureau of Mines and the U. S. Tariff Commission.

4. There have been 5 meetings on the project over a period of six months, some of which were attended by representatives of the afore-mentioned outside agencies who expressed their desire to cooperate to the fullest extent possible.

5. The proposed NIA directive is the outgrowth of the study of the project made by CIG and incorporates the ideas and suggestions made by the other interested agencies and departments.

6. I recommend approval of the recommendations contained in
